

The Object of the Hindu Religious & Charitable Endowment Act

The religious freedom is guaranteed by the Constitution so the intervention of the Government in the administration of religious institution through the Statutory Boards may seem paradoxical. There was no mention of temples in Vedic Collection of Hymns and Prayers. When fire was lit oblations were said to be made in the place there at. In later Brahmana period temples were constructed for accommodation of images of gods. Charities began to flourish and valuable endowments such as landed properties for pious purposes were well established in later period the cult of religious worship developed and Gifts for religious and Charitable purposes were impelled by the desire to acquire religious merit. So the Hindu temples are founded, endowed and maintained generally for the benefit of general Hindu public.

In earlier period it was a private affair and as an when the temples became inspiring centres of the Social and Cultural life of the Community, Centres of promotion and patronage of art and architecture, and other fine arts, and began to serve as a centres of learning and fostering and growth of the piety and learning and as an effective instrument of poor-relief, it began to become a public affair. Thereafter out of the rituals for establishment of endowments which became an object of general public utility. Since dedication is the renunciation of ownership, to the deity, and hence began the accumulation assets beyond imagination and slowly mismanagement, discrepancies, and mal administration began to creep into the temple administration to keep it within the domain of persons with ulterior motive. The avaricious began to root the root of temple affairs, which invited the intervention of the Government to the administration of religious institutions. But the objectives of various enactments of the yester years would mention, as an effort to put an end to the greed of the power mongers, whose quarrelsome contest to grab the flourishing assets of even the almighty, and to protect and make due upkeep of the temple and properties attached thereto, from anti social elements for its eternal existence. As such the object of the legislation of the Madras Hindu Religious & Charitable Endowment Act 1951, as indicated in the preamble is "to amend and consolidate the law relating to the administration and governance of Hindu Religious & Charitable Endowment". So the Hindu Religious & Charitable Endowment Act exists for better administration, protection and preservation of temples and the endowed properties attached thereto, and for fulfillment of the objects, with reasonable restrictions, which do not violate the rights of religious freedom guaranteed by the constitution.
